Vol. XXXIII No. 1 June - 2017

THIS MONTH – June 20, 2017
"Discovering your German Roots
The Great Migration: 1815-1914"
Presented by: Robert Jackson

Even today, after waves of later immigration, more than twenty percent of all Americans claim primarily German descent, and many more have at least one German ancestor. It continues to be the largest single ethnic component of the American population.

To the delight of their descendants, the documentary sources available in Germany, many of them now available in the U.S. on line and on microfilm, facilitate the assembly of family trees of great age and depth, often back to the 1500s.

So where do we start? You know that your ancestors came from Germany, but from where in that huge country? Until we know their specific village of origin, we can't trace their roots. In this, the first of two presentations, we'll discuss the challenging task of discovering the hometown of your German ancestors.

Robert Jackson holds a Ph.D. in history from Harvard University. After several years' teaching at the college level, he pursued a professional career in finance. Since retiring he has assisted a variety of not-for-profit and community organizations and has enjoyed his hobbies of reading, genealogy, and tennis. He lives in Berkeley and lectures frequently on genealogical subjects. Sample websites include sophocles.com/priesmeyer, sophocles.com/meyer, and sophocles.com/duval. ■

From the May Meeting
"Introduction to British Research"
Presented by: Kim von Aspern-Parker
Reported By: Russ Erickson

Britain and Wales have good records to the 17th century, some to 1558, except at the county level. Civil registration began in 1837; before that, look to church records.

Taxes, defense, voting, and planning were reasons for civil registration. Even citizens outside Britain (in the empire) were included. Districts had Registrars for births and deaths, with separate ones ► for marriages. Poor law unions had records from 1834 to 1930. Copies of all went to the London Registrar General, but many were lost there in WWII bombings. General Registrar volume numbers (GRO) are used. Note Civil parishes differ from church parishes before 1837.

There is an alphabetical list of Districts and index of place names from 1837-1979 for Britain and Wales, but not Scotland or Ireland. Birth record information includes name, sex, father's name and occupation and mother's name and maiden name, the informant's name and when registered. Marriages give name, maiden name, marital condition (prior marriage?) and names and occupations of the fathers and if married in church. Death records give date, place, cause, sex and age and informant. No marriage was legal from 1754 until 1898 if not in the Church of England! A registrar of marriages had to be present. From 1813, preprinted forms were used, now available on microfilm via LDS. ►

Census and military records for Britain are available in Ancestry.com (1841-1911). Church records have a "non-parochial" registration for "non-conformists"; any non-church of England. Family Search has "non-conformist" records from 1620-1881 and marriages from 1619 to 1898. Check "free births, marriages, death registration" on Google. There are Bishop's transcripts from 1598 on, but not always exact. There are also wills and probate records.

The civil war under Cromwell from 1642-1660 disturbed many records. Tax records, from 1796 to 1903 for "estate duty" on all estates worth over £10 are available. From 1858, Principle Probate records. Before 1500, check records in museums and historical societies. For New Zealand and Australia, check prison records and the maritime museum records. Census, birth, marriage, and death data for empire countries are in the British Registrar office.

Note, in the mid 1750s, "non-conformist" church members were offered 50 acres to emigrate to South Carolina region and ship records might give ancestors origin site. ■

Reminder – Intro to Genealogy "Bag Lunch" Session Tuesday, June 20, 2017.

The next session of our popular Intro to Genealogy series will be held after the general meeting at the Danville Family History Center. During this session we will review previous topics, answer questions and discuss the next step to organized research. Bring any family information and questions. Assistance will also be available to help with the History Center Library if needed.

Anyone (members, friends, family) interested in genealogy is welcome to attend these free sessions. So bring your bag lunch, stay after the general meeting and pick-up some tips to aid in your genealogy research. ■

Some family trees have beautiful leaves, and some have just a bunch of nuts. Remember, it is the nuts that make the tree worth shaking. – Unknown

President's Message

By Ted Shapas

Have you ever thought about your genealogy "stuff" as a museum, one that happens to be all about you and your family? According to Wikipedia, a museum is "an institution that cares for (conserves) a collection of artifacts and other objects of artistic, cultural, historical, or scientific importance". It doesn't say anything about size, so what you have as documents, photos, stories, records, digital files, and keepsakes pertaining to your family history is really a collection, where it's housed is a "museum", and you are its curator!

That said, what, as a curator, could or should you be doing to make your "museum" better? Here are a few standards and best practices that museums in the US strive for. Many of these could be goals (maybe stretch goals!) for your genealogy collection:

- The museum conducts collections-related research according to appropriate scholarly standards
- The museum has appropriate measures in place to ensure the safety and security of people, its collections and/or objects, and the facilities it owns or uses.
- The museum takes appropriate measures to protect itself against potential risk and loss.
- A system of documentation, records management and inventory is in effect to describe each object and its acquisition (permanent or temporary), current condition and location and movement into, out of and within the museum.

For more on how to treat your "museum", I refer you to National Standards and Best Practices for US Museums: <http://www.aam-us.org/resources/ethics-standards-and-best-practices/standards/>. You'll probably never become the Smithsonian in size, but it's OK to imitate them in quality! ■
