San Ramon Valley Genealogical Society

Vol. XXXIII No. 10 May - 2018

THIS MONTH – May 15, 2018
"How to Hire a Genealogical Researcher"
Presented by: Richard Rands

Knowing when to seek help with a research problem is a good sign that we are motivated to do accurate research. But knowing how and where to go for help can be baffling. Because we obviously want to find someone who knows a lot more than we do about our research questions and has access to sources we cannot find, it is helpful to follow guidelines for finding the right person for your task.

Richard Rands is former president of the Silicon Valley Computer Genealogy Group (SVC GG) and former director of the Los Altos Family History Center. He is past president of the San Francisco chapter of the American Marketing Association, the Northern California/Pacific Northwest chapter of the Marketing Research Association, and the Pacific chapter of the American Association of Political and Opinion Research. Richard earned an MBA degree from the University of California at Berkeley, and an Advanced Certificate in English Genealogy Research from the National Institute of Genealogical Studies at the University of Toronto, Canada.

Richard was a primary author of the genealogy source documentation manual Family History Documentation Guidelines, published by SVC GG, and considers himself a documentation evangelist. He teaches community education classes in genealogy, as well as teaching seminars and workshops throughout Northern California in all levels of genealogy software, methodology, documentation, problem solving, and organizing documents. A former executive in software and hardware, Richard is married to Dr. Janet Brigham and has five daughters. Richard and Janet are active in their own family history research and co-teach a family history Sunday School class. ■

From the April Meeting
"You have your DNA results, Now What?"
Presented by: Pam Miller
Reported By: Russ Erickson

This knowledgeable speaker first gave us 4 pages of: "Some vocabulary, compare the genealogy DNA companies, How to's, Basics internet sites, Great Blogs on the internet, 3rd party apps, What info do you need/want to track your DNA matches, Spreadsheet skills needed." For sites needing pay for tools, pay for the minimum time to see how it helps, then more time if ► valuable to you. Read the instructions fully for all sites used. What a great start for adding DNA to your genealogy!

She emphasized having oldest family members tested early, since each generation shuffles parts of chromosomes.

Pursue your matches; learn phasing, indicating which DNA matches are from maternal and which from paternal families.

Centimorgan is a measure of shared DNA segments. You have them as a given number for a DNA segment and you cannot judge their size by Browser pictures companies give you. Browser pictures from companies indicate where you and your matches might coincide, on which chromosomes. Segment numbers (use only the first 3 digits in each long chromosome number you are given for comparisons, with centimorgans and #SNPs). A Browser indicates where you match entirely, by half, or not at all.

Testing cousins helps a lot, and Pam feels paying attention even to 4th or 5th cousins level can indicate leads to extending your ancestors and family data. Always download your results and have them--what happens if a company folds?

Link tests to your tree--you might contact more possible relatives. Some matches will not respond without your tree availability.

You can make yourself and close relatives private if desired, but allow sharing. Sometimes, there is no tree given, but putting the surname into Family Search or Ancestry will find it. In 23andMe, one can easily separate male and female line names. Data from different companies can be blended via Gedmatch.com.

Place Beneficiary information into your tree and DNA results; prevent its loss to the family. If you test and an in-law grandparent tests, children and grandchildren will have a good DNA base for future matches, allowing easy phasing. Go to the website of the company where you placed your DNA. Click download for the Browser and click on "Matches" and download them. Look for boxes for organizing data.

Ethnicity derived from testing is not consistent and varies with the company; dependent on the number of past testers in each country and region, and with variety of ancestry information given the companies by testers. Self reporting is not always accurate!

23andMe, for Pam, gives the best result, ► with a 7.10 rating vs 3.5 to 4.5 ratio for other companies. Ancestry overestimates British Isles background.

Triangulation: You and a cousin with a Browser match can compare with another match just found to see if all 3 match and therefore have a common family line in ancestors.

Learn to use spreadsheets to place all DNA, matches, and surnames if possible. One can place different family segments in different colors to easily find them. ■

President's Message

By Ted Shapas

History can be summed up by saying "this is important", and genealogy by "this is important to me". Two different attitudes, but not infrequently, they do overlap. A very nice piece by historian (and somewhat accidental genealogist) John Sedgwick just appeared in the New York Times and explores this divergence and convergence with examples; <https://www.nytimes.com/2018/04/12/opinion/sunday/historians-versus-genealogists.html/>. Here's a quote from Sedgwick that should resonate with anyone attempting to write about their family history: "Obviously, history can't depend on genealogy. But history shouldn't scorn it, either. History can make use of the genealogical perspective and its transporting empathic power."

Speaking of history, and looking back through my files, I see that this is my 29th President's Message. It will also be my last, as I will be turning over the reins to a new president in June. We will vote on new candidates at our upcoming May meeting, after which I will assume the role of a past-president. It's been a great three years, and I thank our very capable board, committees, volunteers, and members for their support, ideas, counsel, reminders, good humor, and enthusiasm (and to Barbara for editing these Messages :^), all of which made my job easier and mostly a lot of fun, and kept our society running smoothly. I now look forward to a bit more time for travel, fly fishing, and exploring my sometimes bewildering but always interesting Eastern European genealogy! ■
